With the examples from the meeting with Erin in mind, an initial thought is use a similar technique as my personal portfolio website to create some some interest and intrigue. The user would have to explore the different hovers to learn and experience more about GA's remote offerings with videos auto playing or gifs triggered on the hover.

The problem with this direction is the video and hover state options are limited on mobile. With mobile being a focus for this launch, there are a couple of ways to approach the project:

- Create a separate mobile page that doesn't have as much interactive elements.
- Interaction 1 might not be the best way to go. Explore different solutions.
